It is not enough merely to possess virtue, as if it were an art; it should be practiced.

Live honorably, be wise, know courage, and be of service to others.

HONOR

With heads held high, the snare drum players, freshman Shawmora Harding, seniors Jesse Stephenson, Wes Sparks, and freshman Josh Sousa, show their pride while playing for the Gold Brigade Band. The band competed across the state, receiving honors and awards.

WISDOM

Junior Jessica Tucker and seniors Jason Krug, Jesus Morales, and Erin Deeds take a moment to relax before their intense semi-final brain game match against Cathedral. Advancing farther than ever before, the Brain Game team proved that wisdom was just as important as athletics.

COURAGE

Seniors Ron Mason, Andrew Spearman, and Donald Young focus their energies on the game, finding the courage to press on and stand against their opponents. The boys basketball team represented their school with pride, blazing the path to victory.

SERVICE

Working together to provide a service to their school, seniors Autumn Fechner, Katie Dillon, Humberto Dalla-Porta, and Kurth Kuhn decorate for the Christmas Dance, sponsored by the National Honor Society. Many clubs worked extra hours outside of school to serve the community.

Honor

Honor is not only the value of a name but the reputation of a person or institution. Honor is obtained and kept by everything we say and do. Being a Warrior is honorable, and we carry the glory of our school with us. Respect and admiration are received by the example we set both in and out of school.

To uphold and maintain our honor, we treated each other as well as the things and people around us with respect. The upperclassmen set the standard for the newer Warriors and used many organizations as their teaching tools. We improved our image, as seen by the community, by making the concerts, plays, and musical the best representation of our school that we could possibly manage. We made sure we could be proud of everything that reflected upon us. Honor for a Warrior was losing with dignity, winning with grace, and teaching by example. Honor is the heart of a Warrior.

by Media Trent and Teresa Hromada

King Arthur and his knights were the first to make honor an important virtue in the fifth century. Legends are told of the court of King Arthur helping each other in times of danger. They fought battles against the Irish, Italian, and French. In that time, winning wars and battles made men honorable.

King Arthur and his son, Sir Mordred, battled each other throughout their lives. In 515, Arthur was killed by his son. Legends say that one day Arthur will rise from his grave and ride off to save his people at the time when they most need him, thus restoring their honor and making peace.

HOMECOMING

Feel the heat

When Pike's Devils arrived on Friday for the big game, our student body was ready for them. Everyone's spirits were lifted in high hopes to see the devils get killed by the Warriors.

Homecoming week gave students a break from their ordinary school routines, and a chance to have some fun. "Homecoming week is the most exciting week of school," said junior Esther Ventus.

Signs were made and posted around the school with sayings such as "Singe the Devils" to give some extra spirit to students. Students showed their school spirit off as they dressed up for each spirit day. Showing school spirit wasn't hard as students dressed up in tie dyes and boxers, spirit logos and of course black and gold for the days of spirit week.

Students joined together at events after school ended. Such events were the homelycoming queen contest, the big game against Pike, and the homecoming dance. "The dance was a lot of fun. Everyone was excited from the game and all the other homecoming events. Everyone really got into it and enjoyed themselves," said sophomore Drew Phillips.

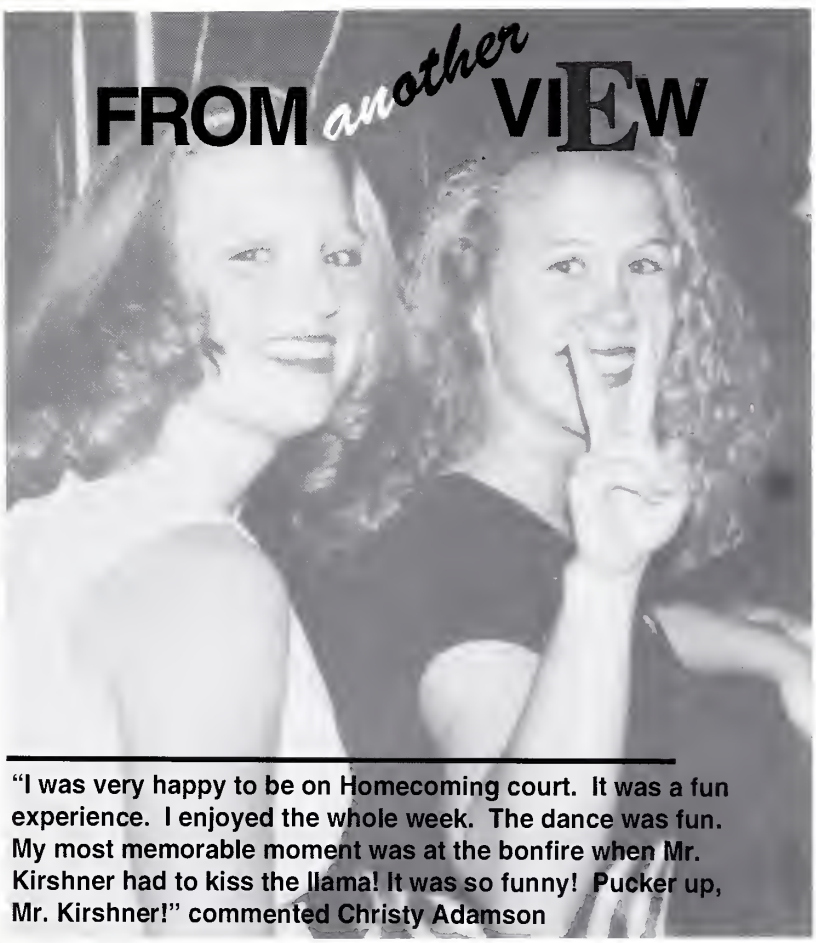
Josh Stayton and Maureen Scott get ready to participate in the homelycoming contest. It was agreed that trading places wasn't as easy as it looks.

The sophomores worked really hard on the hall decorating contest . By beating the seniors they proved just how tough they could be.

The bonfire was a huge success as students from all grades get together to have a good time. The bonfire was to help get spirits lifted for the game against Pike the night after.



"I was very happy to be on Homecoming court. It was a fun experience. I enjoyed the whole week. The dance was fun. My most memorable moment was at the bonfire when Mr. Kirshner had to kiss the llama! It was so funny! Pucker up, Mr. Kirshner!" commented Christy Adamson

The war rages

While the crowd cheered, the Warriors went on to singe the red devils with a heated victory. Knowing that they made Homecoming "95"a story of success, the warriors left the field with great pride.

As the cheerleaders led the Warrior spirit chant, hundreds of faces painted black and gold cheered along. This was no Devil's night, it was the night of the fighting Warriors.

At half-time with a score of 26- 0, Warriors leading, the candidates for the homecoming court were introduced. After a nervous few minutes, the new King and Queen was announced. Bryan Wooden and Kristin Knoy were the winners. "Being crowned was a very moving event for me, I was very honored." commented senior Bryan Wooden.

"Homecoming was fun, with all the weekly activities and the big game against Pike. I think it turned out to be one of the best." commented junior Chrissy Beverly.

The game ended with a winning score for the Warriors, 44-0. As fans left the game they sung the winning song "Why are you so blue? Is it because your number two, and we're number one." By Toya Barnes

During half-time, the homecoming court was introduced. Seniors Kristin Knoy and Bryan Wooden were crowned King and Queen. The excitement was obvious.

Juniors Kesha Minney and Stephanie Parrish got ready to start the show. The Band performed during half-time of the Homecoming Game.

With a score of 44-0, the warriors achieved another win against the devils to add to their season record.

"This was my first year in Marching Band. Band is very exciting and I encourage others to be a part of the Marching Band. We competed in the indoor contest at the RCA Dome. We placed 10th in the country." commented freshman Josh Sousa.

MARCHERS

Hear the beat

Rain or shine the Warren Central Marching Band practiced from sunrise to sunset. It took dedication to get through the hot summer days and cold fall nights. The year ended with a seasonal best performance.

"It was 30 or 40 degrees out and Wes Sparks took off his shirt, socks, and shoes to march. I thought he was nuts because I had on two layers of clothes and I was frozen," said junior Esther Ventus.

Either in the cold or rain, the marching band had to work through the bad weather.

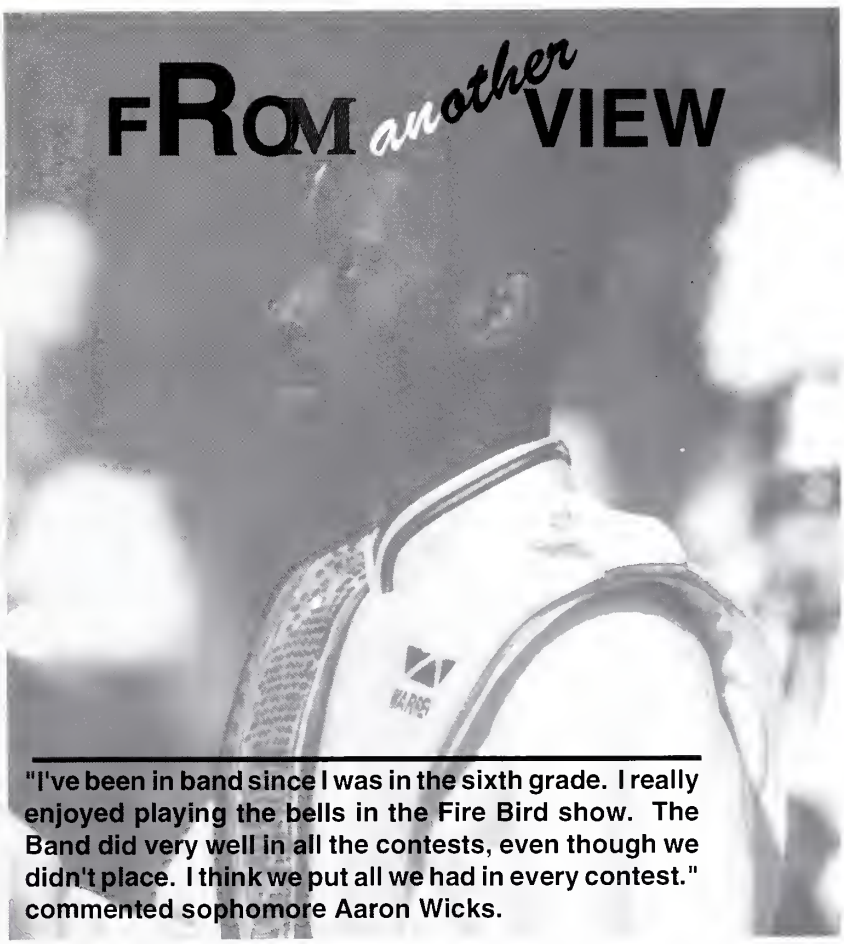
Tiffany Thoman agreed saying, "The weather was so bad in August, that by the time we went home at nine o'clock, you would not be able to recognize most of us through all the layers of mud we were wearing." If you happened to drive by the marching band's practice early in the season you were probably accustomed to seeing the "muddy marchers".

However, bad weather did not stand in the way of having a good practice in order to prepare for competition. Though the season did not go as was planned, most of the marchers agreed that the Evansville performance was the best. "Even though we did not place in the top ten at Evansville, most of us felt we did the best we could, and we are proud of our performance," said sophomore Amy Saylor. By Toya Barnes

In her place for the big performance, sophomore Jenny Gammons ready to do her best as the Marching Band plays "Fire Bird".

Sophomore Amy Saylor keeps all eyes on her bells, while the band played "Fire Bird" by Stravinsky. The "pit" performed a major role in every performance.

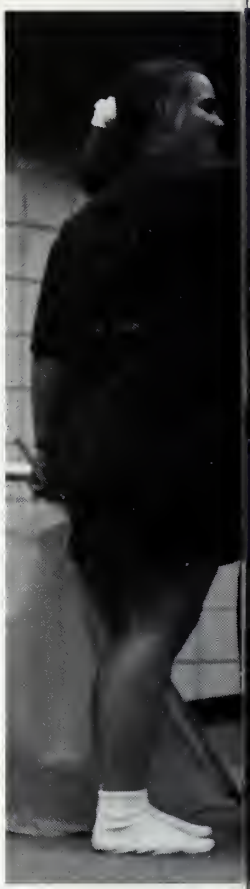
The Marching Band accomplished a lot this season, even though they didn't place at the Evansville Regionals. They did their best at every performance.



"I've been in band since I was in the sixth grade. I really enjoyed playing the bells in the Fire Bird show. The Band did very well in all the contests, even though we didn't place. I think we put all we had in every contest." commented sophomore Aaron Wicks.

COLORGUARD

Keep in step



While the fans were cheering, guard was preparing for the half-time show. As they performed the audience followed their every move. The applause at the end was worth it all.

Through laughs, talks, and tears the color guard had to pull together as a family. The year brought good times as well as bad. "When our guard mother Mrs. Jordan died, it was very hard for everyone, she was a very special friend to us all. We will miss her deeply," said junior Stephanie Parrish.

When the marching season ended, the guard chose music and learned a new dance routine for winterguard competitions. However, the directors decided not to compete in winterguard competitions. "I was very surprised when Mr. Hilmer and Mr. Brooks came to us saying that we were not competing this year. I was upset at first, but it turned out to be fun even though all of the seniors quit," said junior Talecia Williams.

Some performances were more memorable than others. "One of my bests performances was when we performed our "Flintstones" show for the first time," said sophomore Leigh Ann Web.

In March, the guard had their first clinic that consisted of five different areas of training. Flags, batons, riffles, swing flag, and dance were among the areas taught.. The guard and band directors gave every girl a participation certificate. "I had a great time at the clinic, it was very organized. I enjoyed teaching the girls," said sophomore Dionne Rhodes. by Toya Barnes

"With Stephanie being sick, not knowing the rest of our rountine, and trying to choose what to wear, I think we did pretty good. We crammed the rest of our show the night before the contest at Toya's house. Plus I had to do their hair. We deserved that division one." said Junior Kesha Minney.

CONNECTION

Sing out loud

Through much dedication, hard work, and team spirit, the students in Connection had an exciting and challenging time at every performance. They worked together to make all concerts and contests successful.

"It is very rewarding to be in a classroom full of students who really want to be there and be successful," said Mr. Doug Carter about Connection, the top show choir.

Connection was an enjoyable group to be in with many good points, but some students agreed that the group wasn't perfect. Junior Eric Pflieder said, "I really enjoy being in Connection. We get to perform more outside of the concerts than the other choirs. One bad part of Connection is all of the time and effort we have to put into our shows, it can be very tiring."

"My most memorable moment involved show choir contest. Seeing all the other choirs and choreography was very entertaining," said senior Rocky Hicks. Connection did a great job at contest, placing in the top ten at both show choir contests it entered. "Contest was a difficult experience. I think we all worked together and did the best we could possibly do. I am really proud of our choir," said sophomore Charrisa Ford.

Although choir was hard work and stressful to many of the students, being in Connection was its own reward.

Connection delights the audience with its voices and dances. The students involved with Connection worked very hard all year.

Chong Walters and Brian Wooden perform at the Taster's Dinner. Connection sang at many other events other than just contests or concerts.

"At first my mother pushed me to join choir. I really hated it at first, but now, I love it. It's my life and my career," said junior Josh Willard. Sophomore Brooke Fitzwater said, "This has been the best year for me, not only because I got into Connection, but I also went all the way and got to Prelude finals."

ORCHESTRA

Play with style

The audience listened in silence, while the Orchestra played their finest. After a great performance, the orchestra left the stage having won the title of fourth in the state

Bows and rosin are the tools in making great music. "I remember being younger and being awestruck by the Warren Central Orchestra. I realized that I wanted to play as they did," said senior Bennie Harris.

Throughout the year the orchestra's ability led them to play in many prestigious events. They were invited to play in the Honored High School Orchestras concert at Clowes Hall and at the Arts Garden in the Circle Centre Mall. Another achievement was winning fourth in the Orchestra State Competitions. "After three long years of hard work it was nice to see our determination pay off," said senior Stephanie Short.

"I have lots of fun during our bus trip to our competitions." said sophomore Sarah May. With after-school practices and summer practices once a week, orchestra was filled with a lot of fun, laughter, and great achievements. by Toya Barnes

Juniors Tania Purdy and Troy Shea waits backstage preparing for their concert. The orchestra performed for many special occasions.

Senior Michael Wickliff and sophomore Justin Allen play their trombones during their class practice. The orchestra had sectional practices once a week.

During class time the orchestra played warm-up tunes to prepare them for competitions. Spending extra time practicing and having dedication helped them to place in the State Finals.

MUSICAL

Break a leg

The musical "A Chorus Line" was performed in the fall, creating a way for students to relax and enjoy the energetic show. For the performers, the experience was educational. The cast was truly one singular sensation.

This year's musical had many changes. Having the musical in the fall instead of the spring was the most obvious change. The choice was also a great change. This production had a much smaller cast with more dramatic roles.

The cast worked hard to get into their parts and portray their roles to their best ability. "I definitely wasn't type casted. I really loved playing the part of Shiela because she is a total 180 of who I am," said senior Rachel Line.

On stage the show may have looked great to the audience, but success didn't come over night. The cast members worked long, hard hours for many weeks. Sophomore Nancy Fletcher said, "This musical was wonderful. It really showed off our talents. It was very difficult but we pulled it off and did a great job."

Senior Allison Young's feelings explained much of the anticipation. "The most memorable thing about the whole musical is opening night and the curtain going up. It caused a total range of emotions from nervousness to the actuality that we were finally performing, but it was totally exhilarating," said Young.

Junior Chong Walters and senior Tasha Danner perform in the finale. "One Singular Sensation" was the main song performed during the show.

The audience watched as the last number was performed. Everyone in the cast was in the finale, making it the largest number of the show.

The characters in "A Chorus Line" learn the dance steps, trying to make final cuts. The dance, choreographed by Linda Reese, took the cast many weeks to learn.

"My character, Paul SanMarco, was an extremely dramatic role. It took a lot out of me, but I believe that I did very well. I recieved a lot of positive feedback, and even recieved some attention from a director of a local theater... This musical was great!" said senior Rocky Hicks

WINTERFEST

Have a blast

The loud Roar of the Wildcats was silenced as the warrior fans entered the gym to cheer their team on to a winterfest victory. The week was filled with memories that will be remembered by all.

The winter season can be very dull, but with winterfest the season was brightened for everyone. "The entire week of Winterfest was very memorable this year. There was so much participation in every event that you couldn't help but get caught up in the fun." said sophomore Kelli Taylor.

The second annual Goofy Games was one of the most popular events during the week. "I really enjoyed tug-of-war. Our team spirit really came out. It was an event where our strengths could really be tested," Taylor said.

One of most enjoyed activities was the lip sync contest. "I enjoyed "Afros in Harmony" because the songs they chose were known by most of the audience. Although they chose songs from back in the day, they used new and old dances so that the whole audience could relate." said junior Cathy Le.

The pep rally gave the students a chance to get away from class and get pumped up for the big game on Friday night aganist Lawrence North. Senior Toni Toffolo said "The best part was when Christy Adamson tried to throw the pie in Ms. Plummer's face."

"At first we actually didn't know what we were going to do for the lip sync contest. We just went to audition and made up things as we went on. We weren't even prepared with our costumes. We had to use my cousin's group "Jackson Five" wigs. I enjoyed myself a lot." said sophomore Jason Lee.

PROM

Dusk til dawn

As friends and couples entered the ballroom looking their best, they prepared themselves for an evening they would never forget. They danced the night away to the smooth sounds the D.J. provided.

Hand in hand couples and friends entered the midnight blue and gold decorated ballroom for an evening that would turn into lasting memories. "I will always remember dancing close enough to hear my date's heartbeat," said junior Christina Silas.

This special night was not just for couples. Some students went with groups of friends. "I had fun just being with my boys and doing our own thing. We were just chillin' all night together," said senior Cory Hill.

"My friends and I stepped in the prom by ourselves, looking like the divas, but without dates. We still had a great time," said junior Ronita Whitfield.

Silence filled the ballroom, as the candidates for the king and queen were introduced. As the theme song "Take My Breath Away" played the crowned king and queen Jay Woodburn and Kelly Clouser danced while others looked on. "It felt great to win the title of prom king. I didn't expect it, but I appreciate everyone who nominated me," said senior Jay Woodburn. by Toya Barnes

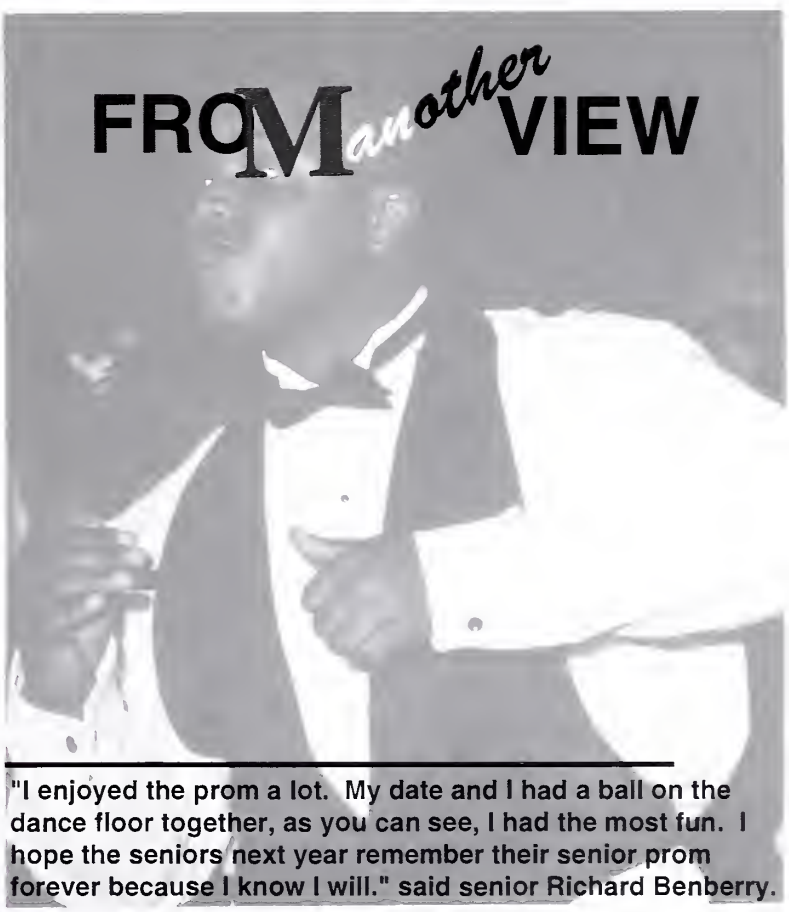
After being crowned, Seniors Kelly Clouser and Jay Woodburn dance to the prom theme "Take My Breath Away" along with the other members of the court.

The prom was filled with a lot of group dancing, one of them was the famous electric slide.



"I enjoyed the prom a lot. My date and I had a ball on the dance floor together, as you can see, I had the most fun. I hope the seniors next year remember their senior prom forever because I know I will." said senior Richard Benberry.

SENIORS

Now its over

The month of May was dedicated to the class of 1996 as their very own celebration. During this month the seniors showed spirit for their class. At the end of the month, they passed the torch on to the underclassmen.

May 1st marked the beginning of the "senior countdown" and a month of fun and remembrance. May activities brought reality to Seniors. Jostens's delivery of the caps and gowns struck both tears and smiles in many seniors as the commencement quickly approached. May 8th brought together in the gymnasium for the second annual senior luncheon. The luncheon was followed by the class photo.

May 12th through May 17th was "senior week". Seniors stood out above the underclassmen with different styles of dress assigned for each day. Included in the activities during senior week was the senior vs. faculty softball game. Despite several cancellations due to rain, a senior team was made who beat the faculty 13 to 11. "Beating the old-folks was the best part of the game, but still needed a better umpire," said Jamie Longerich.

"I was so excited during senior week, I couldn't believe that my high school days were almost over. On Flashback Day I was stylin' in a 70's outfit. I was suddenly moved to tuck a buck in Bill Ferry's 6th grade football jersey. We will miss all of the good old days!" said senior Ben Phillips.

GRADUATION

Don't look back

As the class of 1996 received their diplomas they found that their high school days were over. When they looked back on their memories, they realized they succeeded and were ready to move on.

Graduation marked a time of change. Seniors were able to look back on their high school memories, but at the same time, they thought about future plans: college, careers, the military.

"My plans for the future are college, love, maybe marriage and a family, but I will focus on myself and my life goals first," said Sarah Parsons. Lester Jones and David Kent both agreed that going to college is an important step in the new lives they would be starting. Jones said, "Graduation is one of the best things that happens in your life. After graduation I plan to attend ISU and major in athletic training."

Although the seniors were ready to get out as soon as possible, many admitted that they would miss high school. "My senior year was everything I had expected and much more. This was my best year. I wish I had come sooner. I'll definitely miss it," said Shauna Lawson.

Many knew that making new lives would be a long and difficult task. Senior Charity Berry said, "I don't really know yet what my plans are for the future. I just hope that no matter what I do, my future is successful." by Katie Jay

Toni Toffolo waits for Dr. Pennington to officially declare the class graduated. One of the most memorable moments was when the graduates moved their tassels.

- There are approximately one hundred and fifty million divorces in the United States each year.

- In the United States alone, there are close to seven hundred and fifty thousand children who live with only one parent.

- Of the seven hundred and fifty thousand children living in broken homes, 25% live in an alternative household.

? about unconventional families

Just as values have changed over time, so has the traditional family. The nuclear family is not as common as it was twenty years ago. With divorce rates increasing and single mothers becoming more abundant, alternatives are the norm.

A single mom drops off her young son at school. At home on the Eastside a father begins preparing breakfast for his two daughters. Meanwhile a high-school junior says good-bye to her grandmother as she leaves the house. Families of the 1940's and 50's these are not. While the traditional family still exists, what is considered family today is far from yesterday's nuclear family. According to USA Today, 60% of marriages today will end in divorce, leaving about a million children living in broken homes and thirty six percent of children living away from their fathers.

Some children also live apart from both parents, living with other family members such as aunts, grandparents, and step-siblings, an alternative family. Not only is the structure of the old family gone, but so are many of the roles carried by teens. Today's teenagers seem to have much more responsibility on their hands. "Living with my uncle and aunt, the only responsibility I have is to graduate so when I get out of college I can take care of my father who isn't financially supported that's why I don't live with him,"said Junior Bobby Park.

Responsibilities typically carried out by parentsare now often terms required of high schoolers. If there is only one parent in the household , many teens find themselves pithching in. As Freshman Chad Smothers said, "My responsibility around the house consists of keeping the den clean and doing the dishes."

A change in family structure can often times create problems for teens. Junior Sahera Syed said, "Ithink the biggest problem that teens can go through these days is when and if their parents get divorced."

Some teens can handle the problems well, but what happens to those who lose control?" Talking to your school councelor can help you because they know what to do and they can give good advice",said Sophmore Lori Perry. Problems that occur when the nuclear family is broken are can have lasting results than any adults problem as USA Today said. "As teenagers today, the problems we face are most likely to follow with us as we grow older,"said Park.Children's whose parents divorce when they were young are more likely to get divorced themselves.

Perhaps the family traditions have changed throughout the years, but as councilor Mrs. Hawks said, "The problems that children have in earlier life may fallow, but if we try to help them in their earlier years other problems might not occur in their adult years."by Jessica Nagle

Over 90% of American citizens will marry at least once in their lifetime; however, according to a recent USA Today poll, half will get a divorce. Why are divorce rates so high? A prevailing opinion is that with almost 75% of the women in families holding jobs, women have the means to support their children. Another reason may be societies acceptance of divorce. Society has become desensitized to the practice, and those seeking divorce are no longer outcasted.

?about education

Whether or not there really is a decline in education is still debated, but at least an awareness has arisen. Schools are working to improve test scores, college acceptances, and job rates. The success of these programs won't be seen for a few years at least, until then critics will continue to attack the education system.

On April 11, seven year old Jessica Dubroff made the news in her attempt to be the youngest person ever to fly across the country. The next day her mother made news because of her admission that she and her husband did not believe in sending their children to school. As the nation gasped in surprise, people came to realize this was the kind of attitude that causes the decline in education.

"Lack of parental responsibility affects Warren as it does all public schools," said Mrs. Margaret Covher, head of the English Department. She went on to explain the decline in education is actually, "a decline in parental education." She believes parents need to keep their children in school.

Mr. Dennis McNulty believes a contributing factor to any kind of decline is a "decay of morality in our culture. Rationalization of almost an idiotic behavior seems to be the norm."

Principal Bob Albano understands that parents will not always teach their children morals and values. "If we don't teach that here, they won't be taught," said Albano, "Kids haven't changed, parents have. The responsibility as a parent is much more difficult now."

Critics say schools have taken a nose-dive, but not everyone agrees. "Schools are undoubtedly different than even just a few years ago, but according to studies and statistics there is not a decline," said Mrs. Heather Luce, "One of the biggest changes I have noticed is the lack of internal motivation to accomplish a task." Luce believes that students now don't learn for the sake of learning, but to earn a grade.

Ms. Tina Juarez, principal of a Middle School in Austin, Texas, asked in English Journal, "What is the point of grades and grading ? She like many others believes that grades only work to lower a student's self-esteem.

Mr. Bill Reed, President of Warren Education Association, believes grades are necessary "How else do you know where you stand, what you need to work on, how you compare? "

Albano believes students are brighter and more talented than ever before. Schools are obligated to meet the expectations of the students and raise those expectations. "One of the mistakes that has been made is that we, the professional educators, make too many excuses, thus lowering the standards. We haven't held young people accountable," he explained. When today's students become the leaders, if they aren't ready, society has failed. By Heather Ressler

A decline in education can be affected by many factors. Reasearch shows money makes a big diifference in the quality of schools and the learning ability of students. A recent internet study showed smaller schools, classes, and more experienced and educated teachers all positively related to the students achievement. Another declining factor is total school funding. Research shows school funding is up about 30 percent; however, much of the money is funneled to increased lunches, after-school programs, security, drug education, computer technology, and accessibility to the disabled.

As time passed, we grew and changed within and with others. New and bigger challanges such as colleges and jobs arrived.

The time came for the real test. The test after graduation .....Life.

As we left the halls of Warren Central we realized we've only just begun.

Gary Rennier took advantage of the opportunities offered through his welding class. The Career Center offered many vocational classes to give students a head start on their careers.

Wisdom

Wisdom is more than learning from a book. It is gaining knowledge, both spiritually and physically, from everything you do. Wisdom is gained not for a grade but for the soul. To realize all existing potential, you must fulfill the burning desire of the human heart to be wise. Knowledge is a treasure, when practiced. The price of wisdom is above that of rubies. The wise man is mightier than the strong man; wisdom is greater than strength. Learning is food for the soul and is used to accomplish great things.

Our accomplishments became obvious when grade point averages went up significantly for all four grades. Expulsion and suspension rates decreased as the graduation rate increased. There was an increase in SAT scores and a decrease in the drop out rate. We strived to improve our society by beginning with education, and we proved "The Best Just Got Better."

William Shakespeare, Michelangelo, Leonardo da Vinci, Sir Isaac Newton, and Queen Elizabeth I were major characters of the Renaissance, which was also called "The Age of Enlightenment." Before the reign of Queen Elizabeth I, Europeans had limitations on literature, science, and art. But during the Renaissance, writers, scientists, and artists were encouraged to express themselves freely. Scientists, such as Copernicus and Galileo, could explore ideas that they couldn't have earlier. Artists expressed themselves without the fear of being ridiculed. This period of time caused people to question their world and further their education in all areas, especially the arts. by David Young

"Art is a class for discovering talents and helping to explore the world in different ways. It forces students to draw from and utilize their imaginations," said Mr. Foster, head of the art department. Discovering talents is exactly what the students of Warren did. "Art helps me relax, and gives me something positive to focus on," said junior Kyla Lawson. The art students were responsible for designing various items: Danny Babcock's "A Chorus Line" shirts and programs, Jessie Stephenson's senior shirts, Jerry Miller's student council shirts, and Chris Gaizat's teacher handbook cover. Here senior Debbie Purpura uses her imagination to mold the clay into a fantastic dragon, "I like fantasy art; that's about it." by Elizabeth Lake

Mr. Fredrick's building trades class, which consisted of 16 seniors and 30 juniors, is hard at work on the next Walker Career Center housing project. "Students do about 85% of the electrical work themselves. Plumbing is done in supervision with private contractors" said Fredrick. This, as well as other Career Center courses give students a head start in the job market. Junior Bo Kirby, "I've always liked building things. This is the perfect class" "This is the type of career I plan to pursue. This class gives me the requirements of what I need to do," said junior Jeff Straw. By Trey Obert

Sword fighting was one of the activities that Mrs. Paris allowed her students to do while reading the tragic play, Romeo and Juliet. "One of my primary goals in teaching Romeo and Juliet is for freshmen to enjoy Shakespeare and look forward to studying his works in the future. That is why I let students do things like sword fighting, getting down on bended knee, and reciting romantic quotes, and pantomiming the action of the play," said English teacher, Mrs. Paris. Many students like the way of teaching and the activities offered. Freshman Josh Wise said, "Even though we've just started reading the novel, it's very interesting, and fun to reenact." Freshman Damien Pate, Bobby Dinn, Matt Harris reenact one of the tragic sword fights toward the end of the story. The English Department is always looking for ways to have fun while teaching. By Trey Obert

Fourth year foreign language students were given the opportunity to leave school and teach elementary school children at the surrounding township schools. "The students were pretty easy to teach, and there were only one or two that had trouble," said junior Susan Fairhead who taught third graders at Hawthorne Elementary The children learn their numbers, colors, and expressions by playing Jeopardy, flash cards, and by reading books in the foreign language that they were learning. Here, Marcus Swan plays bingo with the class that he taught at Grassy Creek elementary school.

"I dissected a cow's heart. It felt weird to be able to touch an animal's heart and learn how our heart works at the same time. By having this hands on training, I will be prepared for all the college dissections that I will need for my nursing degree," said senior Erin Hale. Mr. Gray's science classes proved that you can dissect just about anything, as students found themselves studying. Preparation for the dissection averaged two days depending on the animal.

"For any student who may select a fields of study related to life science, biology, or medicine, this hands on background is an important foundation for their career," said Mr. Gray. As Eric Virt's group realized, it's not as easy as it looked. By Trey Obert

"Warren Central is just like an airplane. The only time you hear about airplanes is when they crash (the 'bad'), but then do you hear about the non-crash airplane (the 'good')," said Mr. Greenlee.

Mr. Greenlee is well known for his weekly quotes called "Greenlee-isms". "I like his 'Greenlee-isms'. They're funny and speak the truth," said sophomore Aaron Wicks. These 'Greenlee-isms' allow Mr. Greenlee to not only teach math, but to teach his students life skills, as well, bringing fun and excitement to what is normally thought of as an otherwise tedious class.

"Mathematics is one of the most important aspects of our students' future, and our mathematics department and curriculum allow the students an excellent opportunity for advancement," said Greenlee. By Trey Obert

The home ec. menu looked like a four course meal. Students cooked anything from lasagna to chicken kabobs to cakes. Senior Mike Sakha said, "My favorite dish was the chicken kabobs." Other students favored toward the lasagna, however as much as the students enjoyed eating their creations, they didn't like the fact of cleaning up after themselves. As one student said, "Sometimes people don't clean the lab after they use it." The home ec. dept. gives students opportunities to explore their possible future in cooking. DID YOU KNOW

- About 20% of teenage girls that have sex get pregnant.

- The United States has one of the highest abortion rates in the world.

- 30% of teenage girls who give birth before the age of 16 have a second child before age 18.

? about teenage pregnancy

Did you know that more than one million teenagers and pre-teens get pregnant every year? And did you know that of those one million pregnancies, nearly half of them are ended by abortion?

The 1950's was the last decade in which the majority of teenagers held the belief that having sex before marriage was wrong. Things have changed a lot in the last thirty years. Teenage virgins are now few; twenty-five percent of sophomores and at least fifty percent of seniors are sexually active. According to Newsweek magazine why the percentages of single teen mothers have gone up from thirty-three percent in 1960 to eighty-one percent in 1989.

More than one million teens and pre-teens get pregnant every year with almost half of those pregnancies ending up in abortion. Those who decide to keep the baby must find ways to feed, clothe, and shelter it. Junior Tammi Jones and senior Tim Baugh are the parents of a baby girl. They found a neighbor who could baby-sit their daughter during the day. Tammi also is involved in programs such as Medicaid, WIC, and a government baby-sitting program. However many other expenses and dilemmas linger for the teen parents.

Many teen mothers usually end up dropping out of school, and most who have children during high school fall five to six years behind their peers financially as the labor markets educational demands rise. One half of teen mothers are living in poverty by their mid-twenties.

One idea is that teenagers think they are invincible. Teens have the notion that nothing bad could happen to them, so many don't take the proper precautions and an unexpected pregnancy is the result. "My pregnancy was not at all planned, but I don't regret it. I just wish that I had done some things differently," said junior Jamie Clark.

Clark's opinion reflects other teens' opinion in that only four percent of teen mothers put their babies up for adoption. One junior girl said, "I could never put my baby up for adoption. It would be too hard to give it up after carrying it inside me for nine months."

For most people looking back on high school brings back memories of glory days on the football field, homecoming, and pep rallies, but for some people there are memories of having to find baby-sitters or getting up at the middle of the night to have to change or feed their child. At an age when teenagers are supposed to be care-free, some are being held accountable for the life of another person. by Margarita Serrano

The percentage of teenage girls giving birth has gone up in the last several years. According to a recent Los Angeles Times poll, about 45% of all teens have sex. Of those, nearly half don't use contraceptives, and around 20% get pregnant. Even though it's been proven that contraceptives don't stop the spread of HIV, and AIDS, they can still prevent a teen-girl's chances of getting pregnant. All in all, abstinence is the best way to prevent unplanned pregnancy.

DID YOU KNOW

- 77% of the teenagers surveyed in a recent magazine poll believe that there is racism at their school

- Catholic educators have begun tearing down racial barriers that were commonly accepted in Catholic colleges

- Educators nationwide agree that the problem of school discipline has grown more pervasive and more complicated because of guns, knives, and gangs

? about racism

For more than four hundred years racism has been a major issue worldwide. The tension began with the removal of Native Americans from the white territory, rose with the segregation of whites and blacks, and can be seen in today's high schools.

Since the beginning of time, people have had different views on almost every subject. Exactly how far apart do we stand? Racism exists in every country, every culture, and is alive in the media, schools, the work place, even on the Internet. In January, a Jewish human rights group sent letters to Internet access providers asking them to refuse messages that promoted "racism, anti-Semitism, mayhem, and violence."

The army, protectorate of the American people, announced on December 12, 1995, a search to find white supremacists in their ranks. This search was inspired after two white soldiers were charged for the slayings of a black man and woman in North Carolina.

On March 31, 1994, a Georgian man was executed after evidence was produced that made it clear that the process was tainted by racial prejudices.

Our government officials are supposed to be role models for the rest of our citizens, but Henry G. Cisneros, the Secretary of the Department of Housing and Urban Development, has been documented saying he promotes racial segregation.

Individual cases are called to attention by the media, racism can be found much closer to home. In a student survey, 30% of those surveyed said they were racist or had some racial beliefs. No matter how involved the government is in promoting equality through legislation, the simple truth remains that racism is an inherent quality of the human being.

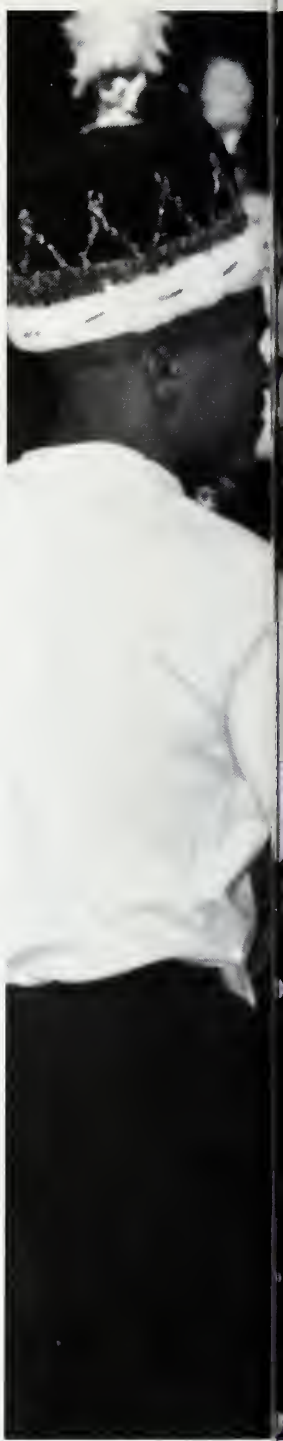
"No matter how many bills or laws are passed against it, nothing can change the way people feel. It will always be a big issue," said sophomore Sherrita Breaux.

Some may say beliefs are irreversible, others believe through education and understanding views can be tempered. A solution may be hard to find, but Warren Central provided programs to start the cycle of mutual respect. Waleed, the Campaign for Respect, as well as the recognized diversity of other student clubs, helped students to see that everyone is equal. Breaking down stereotypes and appreciating differences was the end result of many activities.

"Racism should be ended. Things like our campaign for respect, hopefully, will start changing people's opinions," said English teaher Mrs. Paris. by Media Trent and Teresa Hromada

Cultural differences cause racism. Not understanding these differences feeds racism. Sociologists believe even little gestures and body language people use everyday can contribute. When two people from separate cultures have a conversation, they may need different amounts of personal space. What one person mistakes as an intimidating approach, the other person feels is a way to be closer to someone. When the first person steps back to put a little space between them, the other person feels it as rejection.

Courage



Courage is what gives us the strength to take risks, to leave the security of the present situation in order to pursue a better way. A Warrior does not take no for an answer. We do not settle for second best, a Warrior only rests when the goal has been reached. Courage is meeting something greater than yourself, recognizing its greatness, and facing it with your head held high. Courage is a willingness to face and deal with danger, trouble, or pain. It is fearlessness, bravery, and valor. As students of the '90s, we faced each day with dignity and pride.

We defended sectional championships, while realizing that winning wasn't everything. We not only met but surpassed team and personal goals. When Warren Central's integrity was challenged by the Indianapolis News, we rallied, proving we had faith in our school. We tried to live each day to our full potential, in the true spirit of a Warrior.

by Media Trent and Teresa Hromada

Native Americans held courage important in daily life. Almost every stage of life had a grueling initiation. When a boy became a man, masked dancers beat him with whips to beat all of the boyish things out of him and send them to the gods. He was then given an animal name.

For the tribe to acknowledge a girl as a woman, she had to sacrifice her virginity to hunters or fishermen.

In addition to the daily rituals, the Native Americans survived the take over of the Europeans in the1500s and the discrimination of their people thereafter. They were forced to move onto reservations with many different tribes living together. by Amanda Anderson

Volleyball The Lady Warriors knew they had to become a team before a successful, season could be achieved. Getting to know their teammates' attitudes and abilities helped them form the team unity they later shared.

"The better a team gets along off the court, the better they will communicate on the court. This team was very unselfish and always allowed team goals to come before individual goals," said Coach Plummer.

Off the court the ladies were involved in many activities that allowed them to strengthen their relationships. "I remember when our team went and suprised Coach Plummer at her baptism. It was a very special moment for her and I'm glad our team was able share it," said sophomore Lindsay Kaylor.

Using proper technique learned in practice, the team competed against many tough opponents such as Carmel.

Leaving the field with a tough loss to L.C. in Sectionals, the Warriors looked back with pride on the season.

Football The season was a struggle for the football program. The freshman squad finished the year with more losses than wins while the junior varsity team managed to have an even record. Even though both teams experienced many difficulties, it was the varsity team who faced the toughest challenges.

"The season wasn't too productive considering the 5-5 record," said sophomore cornerback Ramirez Willis. "We lost some very close games."

While there were a few bright spots in the season, such as the Western Hills game, inconsistency and close losses to Carmel and North Central may have cost the Warriors their goal of winning the state championship. Still, Coach Shelbourne was proud of his team's efforts. "The team worked hard all season, I'm especially impressed with performance of the senior players; they really led the team," Shelbourne said. by Mike Turner

Boys' Soccer Rain or shine, no matter what the condition, as long as there wasn't lightning, the warriors practiced; beginning each practice with a quick jog, and team stretch. Next came the words hated by most soccer players, "Okay gang, take a trip." The "trip" was a three-quarters run along the outsides of the practice football fields and onto the soccer field. Once warm-ups were over it was time for drills.

"Drills were a very important part of our practice, they helped us to improve on mistakes made in the game the night before," said coach Gary Roberts. Drills consisted of running and ball skills. "My favorite drill is one on one, or 1 v 1, because I'm faster than most of the people on the team, so I can get to the ball first and score. I also liked the six on six drills. The drills were real physical, and going up against the more experienced players helped to improve my performance on the field as well," said Joe Alden. Boys' Tennis The boys' tennis season was a combination of competition, fun, and bad weather. "One day we were having a great practice when all of a sudden it started to pour down rain and it started lightning," said junior Brian Cochran. The fun never stopped for the players.

The team was competitive in every match and at all three levels, freshmen, junior varsity, and varsity. "In years past, the Warriors have fallen prey to a select few, like Franklin Central, Lawrence North, Southport, and Ben Davis, but this year we stepped up and met their challenge and defeated these teams," said Coach Rich Shepler. by Heather Ressler

Girls Swimming The girls swim team had to adapt to a lot of changes. For some it was a new coach, for veterans it was the loss of seniors. A big change was the freshmen coming to swim. Senior Kelly Waelde said, "If I could have changed the season, I would have had more practice in the pre-season. With the amount of new freshmen, we had a lot of talent, they just needed a lot of work. The team did a lot better toward the end of the season, which made it more enjoyable."

The biggest change was adjusting to a new coaching system and being able to get up at five in the morning. "Although our scores didn't show it, this season was very successful. We lost a lot of swimmers because of the five-thirty practices, but that left us with a group of very dedicated athletes. It was a season of improvement, because everyone shared a common goal," said senior Lisa Dean. by Kristy McPhillips

Girls Golf Improvement is one of the hardest elements of sport. It involves practice and skill. The girls golf team was very successful in this aspect. "I have to say that our new coach, Mr. Darko, is the main reason we improved. He encouraged us to do our best and spent personal time with each of us," said Jamie Ertle.

Jessica Price agreed with her, "With all the help from the team and from my coach I have improved greatly since I started playing."

The girls had to adjust to almost half of the team being novices. "At the beginning of the season it was 'how do you hold this thing?' by the end, their scores had improved and we relaxed and had fun." said Ertle. by Heather Ressler

Boys Basketball In sports there has to be confidence in order to get the job done, and it's up to the coach to give the players faith. This year's boys varsity basketball team started the season off with a new head coach, Scott Heady, who had to gain his player's assurance before he in turn could boost them up. "In the game of basketball, you have to have confidence to do anything and these boys proved a lot to me my first year here," said coach Heady. The season turned out to be a good one, with a final record of 11-10. "We had a good season, but we fell short of a great season," said junior Willie White. The boys team had some exciting games this season. They defeated state champions Ben Davis and lost ot a 12th ranked Franklin Central team, in double-overtime by one point. Girls Soccer As the girls soccer team took the field, they had one thing in mind: attitude. Senior captain Cortney Cochran said, "Our attitude this year was to keep pushing ourselves, stress teamwork and never give up. This was more of a rebuilding year." Weightlifting and conditioning began in June and July, with the real practice beginning in the hot summer days of August. Hard days of running and staying in shape paid off whenthe season started. "We had a different group of girls this year. We had senior talent, but we also had a lot of help from the freshen girls. I was very pleased with the team effort that was going around from person to person," said coach Gary Roberts. After playing months of soccer and learning the team goals, the season came to an end. "For my first year on the team as a goalie, I was very happy how the season turned out," said junior Jamie Buffalari. by Jason Buffalari

Corey Hill looks for the shot as he uses his speed to shake his opponent. The Warriors finished the season with a 12-15 record.

Its not Just the Speed

It takes a lot of heart, desire and dedication to win.

Girls Cross Country Preparation is a big part of sports, but not all of it takes place during practice. Cross-country runners say that being mentally prepared is also a part of the actual competition.

"As a team we go over the course, walking and running, to get warmed up. Then we circle up and do stretches, usually led by our captain," said Laura Spillman.

The girls also prepare themselves individually. Captain, Stephanie Van Y, said that she appreciated those last few minutes alone to "come back to reality and realize you're about to run a race."

Spillman prepared herself mentally in a rather unique way. "I often write my time, my splits, a cross and an inspirational saying on my hands so I can read them and keep going during the race. I also pray, in addition to the team prayer."

All the preparation leads up to one thing, the start of the race and the runners doing their best. Van Y explained it as feeling, "nervous, excited, dumbfounded, like nothing else matters in the whole world, right before the gun goes off, in your mind there is dead silence." by Heather Ressler

Dedication and determination helped keep the boys swim team together. Dennis Jackson concentrates on what he needs to do to win his heat.

Boys Swimming Despite only winning one swim meet and losing a vast majority of its members, the boys swim team did their very best in proving themselves to many people, especially to Coach Logan. "The number of points the team would score at a meet did not show that we lost any members at all," he said proudly.

The remaining team members did whatever they could to keep their season afloat. "I started to do some swimming, even though I was a diver," stated Jason Tillage. "For only having six swimmers, we gave many teams a run for their money."

Although there were many empty spaces on the roster this year, Coach Logan hopes to prove to Warren Central that the swimming program will get better next season.

"I hope to have more team publicity and more team building exercises next season," he said. by Mike Turner

Girls Basketball An injury to one player effects the whole team. The girls basketball team lost a key player this year to an Anterior Cruciate Ligament tear. "When Natalie Visker first tore her ACL many of us got down and started thinking that our team was not going to be as strong as it had been before. As time went on we realized that if we pulled together and worked as a team we could be just as good," said junior Steffany Thompson. With Natalie out, many different players had to work harder to take her place, "Natalie's injury meant that I had to step up and take on more responsibility as a substitute," said sophomore Karen Dillon. The team played many exciting games. "I enjoyed the Franklin Central game a lot. Everyone was involved in the game and playing well. When our forwards and centers hit threes, like Joy Krause, you know your team has played an all around good game," said senior Kristin Morgan. by Kristy McPhillips

Fighting for the ball, Senior Joy Krause is determined to keep possesion for her team. The season ended with a record of 13-6.

Junior Ronita Whitfield looks to the inside for a shot down low. The Lady Warriors lost to a tough Perry Meridian team in County.

Boys Cross Country The boys cross country team hit the pavement whether it was morning, noon, or night. The season started with some struggle, but in the end the team was very solid. "We came out very strong this season. I was really proud of the team's accomplishments," said senior Carlton Simmons. Before meets, many of the team members spent time with one another. "Spending time together, and getting to know each other's strengths and weaknesses really helped my performance," said senior Josh Stayton. The runners came together and formed a close knit group. "We all tried very hard to run well, not just for ourselves, but for everyone," said junior Mike Derryberry. The season ended at regionals. On the mats or on the bars, preparation and mind set dominate.

Wrestling Preparation for a match is almost as important as the match itself. Many athletes follow a different routine than usual the day before or the day of a game or match. "The night before a match I try and eat pasta because of the carbohydrates for energy," said junior Richard Clevenger.

"Other than stretching out, breaking a sweat, and practicing some moves, I always pray to my Lord and Savior Jesus Christ before a match," said Justin Smith. Whether it was the practice or routines that were followed, everything fit together to create success for this years wrestling warriors. "I felt very confident about this past season, although it could have been better," said Richard Clevenger. by Angela Hancock

Gymnastics Many sports use a great deal of concentration and mental focus to perform a given task, but gymnastics require much thought and attention. Letting nervous tension get to a gymnast could cost that person the meet.

"When I was a freshman I would get extremely nervous before meets," said senior Rachael Line, "but now I realize that competing is fun and not worth getting uptight about."

The gymnastics team was taught on an individual level to stay focused through an entire meet and to not fret over past or future mistakes. "Mental preparation is a key for gymnastics," said Coach Seymour. "The athlete who has focused is the one that executes the perfect routines."

Coach Seymour's coaching techniques and sound advice has had a positive affect on her athletes, resulting in drastic improvements in most of them. "She made us realize that we just needed to have fun," said sophomore Sarah James, "and no matter what, do the best job we could have done." by Mike Turner

Superstitions and problems fill the minds of players

Baseball In a sport that is dominated by statistics, it's ironic that a baseball player would rely on a power that defies the odds in order to succeed. That power is called superstition, and from not washing uniforms to talking to dirt on the pitcher's mound, this strange force is known throughout baseball, especially on the varsity team.

"With every pair of kleets I have owned in my high school career, I have skipped a pair of holes where the shoestrings go," says senior pitcher Jeff Terry, "just as my favorite pitcher, Greg Maddux, has done during his life."

"I always wear a wristband on my left arm and I never step on the foul line," says junior shortstop Corey Langston.

Despite the strong influence that superstition has on the team, Coach Preston has mixed thoughts about it. "I believe in crucial situations that the ball is hit to the weakest player on the field," he explains, "but I don't believe in anything else of that nature."

It's weird trying to explain a phenomenon that manipulates people the way it does, but as senior outfielder Chris Harmon concludes, "If someone believes they will have bad luck, they probably will, and vice versa."

Girls Tennis Determination, self-confidence, and perseverance are just a few key elements in sports, but so are problems. Problems can complicate any team's season, and the girls tennis team was no exception. Miss-communications, loss of seniors, and a populous team are just a few that the team had to overcome. "The loss of all the seniors really handicapped the team. The athletic ability of the juniors made up for it," said senior captain Joy Vang.

Obstacles did not always mean a loss, in fact, they often helped a player to grow and mature. "Not having any previous varsity experience hurt me in the beginning of the season. As the year went on I learned how to deal with the many pressures of a number one singles player," said junior Mindy Swan.

Problems do not only effect the team. The coach must deal with the problems of all the athletes. "Getting the varsity team in excellent (not just good) condition and mentally prepared for each match was a big problem," said coach Brooks. "Sometimes to get ready for a match we would have 'no talk' practices to get the team to focus and concentrate." The girls tennis team had a tough season, and working through problems was only part of it.

There is No finish Line

Athletes continue to strive for success, never giving up

Boys Track The one drawback of accomplishing a great feat is that everyone expects that person or group to do it again or to beat the previous achievement. After winning the 1995 State Championship, the varsity track team was faced with that very dilemma coming into this season. "More teams want to gain recognition by beating us," said senior Ryan Edwards.

Even knowing the pressure to maintain the competitive nature of last year's team, Coach McNulty kept up the "never lower the standards" of his and told his team to be prepared for this season. "The potential of the athletes on this team had influenced the goals we've set," said McNulty.

Staying in shape was the advice Coach McNulty gave to his athletes, and that is exactly what they did, as they did everything from weight-training to running up and down bleachers. The main motivator, however, isn't what their coach or parents said, it's a memory. The team relived that memory by winning the State Championship for the second year in a row. by Mike Turner

Girls Softball When the score is tied at the end of the seventh inning the pressure is on. Going into extra innings involves staying focused with a strong desire to win. "Pressure brings out team unity and makes everyone concentrate more and focus on winning," said senior Jackie Belter.

Expectations grow along with emotions as every error could turn into a loss. "I try to take it all in stride and concentrate on the good aspects of the game. You can't let the pressure get to you or you will make many more mistakes," said senior Allison Young.

Extra innings can also show a team their strengths and weaknesses. "In the Roncalli game we played 11 long innings. Although we lost because of a few errors I was proud of our team and the way we hung in there," said junior Karri Thomas. by Angela Hancock

Junior Sheri Wright pitches the softball in a game against Brebeuf. The lady Warriors ended the season with a winning record.

Look ahead To the Finish

Teams fought with Indiana weather and opponents to finish first

Relaxing before a race helps to keep emotions in check. Freshman Tiara Harrison runs the 100 and 300 hurdles for the varsity team.

Girls Track The ultimate motivator is support. That is when someone is in your corner no matter what the situation is, thus making an athlete more confident in his or her ability. This is one of the factors that drives the varsity girls track team to great accomplishments and it is something very prevelent among teammates. "We encourage each other verbally," said sophomore Leah Stanfield. "We cheer on our runners and let them know we support them."

Cheering on teammates and giving them expertise on a subject is far different than recieving the praise, especially when you might be upset about not accomplishing something you were intent to do, but even that doesn't bother anyone on the track team. "I'm treated the same in both victory and defeat. Even if I do not win I'm still treated like I won because I improved, and improvement is a big deal," stated junior Shawnya McCray.

Improvement is something that any coach can be proud of, but to the new head of the girls track team, Coach Nickleson, her athletes concern her the most. "If any of the ladies (on the track team) are having problems outside of track, they know I will aways be there for them." by Mike Turner

Junior Joe Witchie swings and looks on to see where his ball will land. Concentrating and keeping focused played a large role during the golf season.

Boys Golf As spring time approaches, the boys golf team readied for a new season. Weather was a deciding factor in many matches. "I was pleased that my season turned out decent even with the bad weather," said senior James Spinks. However, continual cold and showers early in the season caused problems. "Weather plays a major part in my game. I find it hard to play in the cold and when its windy," said junior Jeff Hintz.

Coach Darko said, "The team had a lot of potential." The season was successful in the victories over such teams as Ben Davis.

Weather can effect more than just the green, it can also wear down a player's spirits. The player must work through a tough hole by themselves without a crowd to help them get back into the game. Skill and patience as well as dedication to the game were the combination necessary for victory. by Jason Buffalari

? about teens and gangs

"Gangs" has become a buzz word that causes people to close their eyes and turn away. With the growing numbers of kids involved in these institutions, ignoring the problem is becoming more and more difficult. Bandanas representing gang involvement can be seen hanging out of the backs of pockets, or in the bitter end, draped over a grave. The alarming truth must be faced.

A store alarm goes off. Five boys are seen fleeing the scene, all with blue bandannas in their back pockets. The next morning's paper has a small headline on an inside page, "Gangs may be linked to robbery". These incidents are becoming more frequent. The outbreak of gangs over the last decade has attracted much attention from media, parents, and school administration. What many closed their eyes to in the past has been brought to the surface by studies and surveys.

In March 1988, 65 percent of 530 high school students surveyed by the Indianapolis Public Schools Behavior and Discipline Task Force said they had seen physical fighting in school as a result of gang activity. Why gang activity is becoming more prominent has become a pressing issue.

Teenagers join gangs for many reasons. Some feel protection and security in a gang and want friendships with other members. This indicates something is missing elsewhere in their lives. The majority join due to problems in their families. A gang gives a sense of belonging and importance not supplied at home.

Once a teenager makes the decision to join a gang, the rules and discipline system keep them faithful. Typically gangs have an oath for admission. One such oath includes a phrase that reads, "Death before disloyalty." Drastic, yes, but penalties for breaking rules, are even more so. The rules include things like a chain of command and never to betray the gang. The penalties for breaking these rules often include "bodily harm", or "execution".

While unbelievable, the fact remains that Warren is not immune to the problem. "There are two major gangs at Warren Central, the Disciples and the Vice lords. However, the gangs here are mild compared to those I've dealt with at other schools. I think it's because the administration is more strict here," said Security Officer Williams.

Officer Williams specializes in gang activities. His job is to learn as much about the language, hand symbols, and colors of gangs. He works with many organizations to stay a step ahead of Indianapolis gangs.

The existence of gangs is denied by many, but no one can ignore the startling numbers of kids involved. By Media Trent and Teresa Hromada

An epidemic that hurts children the most is not spread by a virus, but is passed on by weapons of destruction. Each year, an average of 1,400 children in the United States are murdered by guns, 541 of them by accident, and approximately another 1,500 young Americans take their own lives in the same way. On average, there are 45 gun-related accidental killings of teenagers each month. That is 45 families every month that must face the agony of losing a child.

? about religion in school

In simpler times, all students said the Pledge of Allegiance, and all graduates were sent into the future with a prayer. However, times have changed and arguments over what students should and should not have to be subjected to have arisen.

Isn't it odd that the same people who open every session of congress with a prayer, have told students they don't have that same right for every session of school? What about the Supreme Court, aren't they being a bit hypocritical when they tell schools a display of the Ten Commandments is not allowed, yet they sit beneath a bronze plaque with the Commandments inscribed?

In 1962 The Supreme Court established separation between church and state. "When prayer and a respect for God were pushed out of public schools, drugs, guns, AIDS and murder swept in." said Barbara Reynolds in USA Today. Many students agree with her.

"Having seen the condition of current society, is religion so bad?" asks Jesús Morales. The public agrees with this outlook. In a 1993 USA Today poll, 69% of those polled were in favor of a Constitutional amendment that would allow prayer in public schools. A compromise would be a moment of silence.

Eight out of nine students said that they would participate in a moment of silence each morning. "People who choose to could use it for religious reasons, and others could use it to clear their mind, relax, or whatever," said Vicki Oliver. Rachael Line felt a moment of silence would help start the day on a positive note.

A few students feel a moment of silence would be beneficial, but could cause problems. "I would participate in a moment of silence, but I don't feel many students have the respect necessary for such a thing." said Tabitha Ditchley.

Every year seniors start wondering if there will be a prayer at commencement. The law says a student can say a nondenominational prayer.

At the Senior Luncheon, and at the Set a Good Example Banquet, a blessing was given. Principal Albano explained why, "The law is open to interpretation. I am the principal and must follow the law, but I also have to set an example for the students."

Even with everything the government has done, religion isn't lost completely. "Nobody's saying I can't practice or talk about the religion of my choice– they're just saying they're not going to give me school time to do it," said Oliver.

Introducing religion back into the schools is likely to help more than hinder students and their education. by Heather Ressler

In recent years, religion in school has erupted into a national "no-no". Due to a Supreme Court decision in the early nineties, graduating seniors cannot say a prayer before commencement. Parents thought this decision best, as the schools could not force their religious preferences onto students. Because of the attitude that religion and school should be separated, The Pledge of Allegiance has been forced out of the school curriculum. God has forced students into a "moment of silence", in which personal thoughts are focused on whatever a student may choose.

Service

Service is giving time and talents to others. By doing for others and not expecting anything in return, you not only help but invest in yourself. A society can only survive if people give back to the community and to each other in times of need. Philanthropy is uplifting to the human spirit. It is showing compassion and feeling a desire to do good.

We found that the greatest reward for doing is the opportunity to do more. The more we served others, the more we got out of our own lives. Warriors served their community by being role models for the young. We helped them recognize the dangers of drugs, and showed them that believing in themselves was the way to fit in. We realized that others were less fortunate than us and put our own time and efforts into trying to change their circumstances. Service keeps the heart of humanity beating.

During World War II, a patriotic wave surged across the country. In order to support the war effort, many Americans bought war bonds, which bought bullets and airplane parts and helped to control inflation. The bonds also helped citizens feel that they had contributed to the war. Even celebrities bought and supported war bonds.

Besides war bonds, many people, especially women, volunteered with the Red Cross. Others planted victory gardens so there would be enough food. Most Americans collected old rubber, paper, and scrap metal for war supplies. The spirit of American service helped carry the country through the war.

Students reach out to the community

Acts of philanthropy taught students about life and about themselves

In late Novmber an article was printed in the Indianapolis News about the students of Warren Central and the lack of respect shown to their elders and peers. The article exploited, distorted, and exaggerated events in order to attract readers. While negative attention may have come, it also had a positive effect on many students. The article was a call for students to join together to try and change the reputation they were unfairly given.

Every year Student Council holds a function for less fortunate children of Warren Township who may otherwise not have a Christmas. Classes showed their dedication to the community by raising money and buying the children gifts.

of the best parts of Christmas kids. It influenced me because I knew that I was helping others in my community," said freshman Matt Griggs.

Children weren't the only benefactors of Student Council generosity, they also held the holiday food drive. The school collected 35,000 cans of food, and donated them to two church food banks. Mr. Tom Armstrong's class came out on top with the most cans, winning free orange juice and doughnuts.

Freshman Chad Smothers said "I liked that feeling I got, being able to help underprivileged families at Thanksgiving."

Other clubs got involved in the spirit of giving as well. The National Honor Society sponsored a clothing drive.

Junior Gina Whitmore said, "It was kind of fun sorting through all the clothes, because there were some odd clothes contributed."

Many students were able to give back to their community during the school's blood drive, held by the Central Indiana Regional Blood Center. Over 12 adults and 190 students gave blood. With each donation of blood given, four patients were helped.

Junior Julie Godme replied, "I gave blood because I wanted to be able to help someone else."

School clubs provided opportunities to help out others, as did many classes.

Project Set was a class and club that sent high school students into elementary schools to learn teaching skills for younger children.

Junior Mary Bankhead explains, "In general we have a good time, and it's really rewarding. It makes me feel extremely special when thirty-forty children are looking at you with open eyes and smiling faces."

Many classes, such as dental assisting, allowed students the chance to get a taste of the careers they may want to pursue, and at the same time be doing services for others.

Senior Erin McMullen said, "Experience is a necessity when going into the work force. In dental assisting everyone will have the chance to work in a specialty office and learn what dental assisting is all about."

"I think much of the students' time and energy is consumed by school and work obligations. However, I do believe that there is a core of generosity at the center of most students, and if they find a cause that appeals to this spirit and their interest, they will arrange time to contribute willingly," explains Ms. Cindy Taylor. By Angela Montgomery

Mr. Snellenberger and the students in Clowning Around got together for a picture at an elementary school.

Bringing issues to light benefited everyone

Being responsible meant being aware of the world we live in and its' effects.

From the time we are young we are taught to do unto others as we would have them do unto us...ah, the great Golden Rule. Somehow though, it seems as we get older and leave the close confines of our parents (they can no longer remind us immediately to say please and thank you) we sometimes feel less compelled to help others or even always do the right thing. A focus for many clubs, classes, and groups were issues that affected their peers and the community around them. Raising awareness in all grade levels about drugs and alcohol, drinking and driving, the environment and respect were only some areas Warren students worked on this year.

Choosing popular events to bring a message to light was effective for student council. Prom, always a big night for students, was at the heart of their anti-drinking and driving campaign. The message was sent that ending the night with a few drinks was in no way cool.

On the Friday before prom, students selected by the Grim Reaper "died" for awhile. Unable to talk or interact with others, students were able to get the full effect of what it would be like if their friends died in an alcohol related accident.

"The Grim Reaper is a reminder to students and teachers that accidents do happen, especially when drinking alcohol and driving are included. It also makes the students realize how much they would miss their friends if they actually did die," said senior Kristen Cox.

Student Council encouraged students to sign petitions pledging to stay sober on prom night. "I don't think that signing the petition is a waste of time because it will make people think before they do something stupid," said sophomore Liz Parsons.

Other groups targeted the youth of the Township. Mr. Snellenberger and the Clowning Around club brought the dangers of drug and alcohol abuse to the attention of youngsters. "I feel the entire township in Warren needs a more effective anti-drug and alcohol program. There needs to be more unity amongst students, parents, teachers, and administration at all of the schools in Warren Township," said Mr. Snellenberger.

Another cause that united students and teachers was the environment. The National Honors Society attempted to make students aware of our environment by having a "Penny War" between all the grade levels. The goal was to collect a mile of pennies which was $844.40. The money that was collected was given to the Indiana Nature Conservancy. Although they did not reach their goal, Mrs. Stauffer said, "I think most students care about the environment now."

The presiding theme of the year at Warren was respect. During February activities were held emphasizing what benefits were for respecting those around us. Students were watched by teachers and faculty during the month, and those exemplifying true acts of respect were rewarded with Wampum bucks, that themn were used in an auction.

Awareness was understanding what was happening in the community as well as society. Through club activities, students learned, and hopefully helped to make things better for future generations.

Striving for the best brought results

Settling for second best was never an option; improvement was always in the works.

With construction completely out of the way and several new teachers and policies in place, the theme for the year was definitely improvement. Everyone did their part to improve the reputation, academic, and athletic standings of the school.

The Earth Club started the improvement trend with a recycling project. The idea was first thought of by the PTSA, and the Earth Club was asked to help. Bins were put inside fifty classrooms. Students and teachers were encouraged to put recyclable materials in the bins, which were collected by students on Wednesday mornings. After that a recycling corporation picked up the paper. The proceeds from the project were split between the two clubs. "It establishes a positive attitude toward recycling and returns money to the students through the PTSA and the Earth Club," said Mr. Richards, advisor of the Earth Club. Other activities sponsored by the club were tutoring and an Envirothon.

Self- improvement was important as well. Working toward a higher academic standard, the top ten students from each class were recognized at a banquet at the end of the year.

"I think it is very rewarding to be a Top Ten student. I work very hard to get the grades I do, and it is nice to have my hard work pay off," said junior Heather Hagen.

Senior Jason Krug said the best part of the banquet was the letters the students wrote to the people they felt were most influential in their lives. "Seeing the surprised looks on their faces made it all worth it."

Other programs that helped students to strive to be their best were the two leadership seminars. The first camp, held in July, was for ninth grade students coming into Warren Central. It was designed to increase awareness of leadership potential and to develop strong leadership abilities.

"Students develop awareness of leadership traits, goal setting, and communication skills. They also learn about WCHS and potential involvement in WCHS activities,"said Frank Bynum.

The second seminar was sponsored by Student Council and the administration. Student leaders were chosen from all school groups to attend the all-day retreat, which taught students how to be more successful leaders.

February was designated as the Month of Respect. This campaign was designed to teach students how to respect themselves as well as their community and the people around them. Wampum , or play money, was given to anyone who was seen committing a random act of kindness. At the end of the month, an auction was held where students could use their wampum to bid on prizes.

Improvement on all aspects of the school will continue. "I would like to see a new approach to the respect campaign including some type of self respect. We have to start from the inside and give ourselves a self evaluation before we can really have self-respect," said Mr. Albano.

Students' willingness to help, whether it be other students, community, or administration, was a key reason for the improvements made. by Mindy Wade and Tresanay Bentley

Student activities benefit community

Entertaining others provided fun for people of all ages

All work and no play makes Jack a dull boy may be an age-old adage but it still rings true in the nineties; luckily some things never change. Perhaps to some school represented only academics, education, grades and tests, but most students found the time for a little fun and relaxation either during or after school.

A benefit of a school the size of Warren was the wide variety of activities one could choose from; there was definitely something for everyone. What's more, many of the classes, clubs, and extra-curriculars that students found themselves putting extra time into often had benefits that extended to the community. The students who participated in Reader's Theatre entertained over 10,000 people during the course of the year, with their primary emphasis on young children.

"Readers Theatre is fantastic because we get to teach younger kids what's right by performing for them. We teach them what to do about drugs, and ways of showing respect," said junior Shanna Lindsey.

Educating ourselves, as well as others, played a key role in the focus of many groups. One group, Waleed, dedicated themselves to learning more about their heritage and culture. Through weekly meetings students discussed different issues such as future plans and how to be role models.

In December the members held a Kwanza celebration, open to anyone, which further taught others about this African-American holiday. Being involved in this organization also gave students the opportunity to sing in the Waleed gospel choir. The choir could be found performing at Madam Walker Theatre, for area churches and organizations, as well as giving concerts for the community at the PAC center, and performing in contests.

Music and the theatre were among the offerings that kept many students around the school long after 3:00 had passed. Avenues to show off acting talent were presented in the forms of A Chorus Line, Hey Little Walter, Arsenic and Old Lace, Coffeehouse Theatre and One-Act Plays. Being a part of the plays and choirs allowed students to forget about their problems and just have fun.

"I love performing in choir because I like getting away from reality for awhile," said junior Amanda Blankinship. And get away they did. During spring break over sixty choir students went to New York City to perform. When they weren't singing they were able to go sight-seeing and goof around with friends, once again proving there was fun to be had while doing something for others.

The only music to be heard after school didn't necessarily come from the choir room all the time. The Walker Career Center radio station kept the tunes coming long after the last bell.

"I like being in charge of the air waves. It's fun to stay after school to do the air shifts and I get to play the music I like," said junior Heather Lopez.

The activities that gave so much enjoyment wouldn't have been successful without dedication on the part of students and staff, as well as by support from the community. Students proved serving others could be fun. by: Mindy Wade

- In 1994 a proposal to ban flag desecration was passed by The House of Representatives, but was rejected in the Senate on grounds of freedom of expression.

- The Hazelwood decision, passed in 1988, ruled high school journalists' freedom of speech was not protected, and gave school official editorial control over publications.

- The First Amendment Coalition, an organization of Harvard Students, works to defend individual rights, and to challenge policies and practices that infringe on "intellectual freedom."

? about the first amendment

The United States is known as the land of the free because of the personal freedoms given to us by the Bill of Rights. However, many people need to stop and ask themselves, did our forefathers mean to protect the act of flag burning, or public speeches that advocate violence, or the right for students to wear obscene tee-shirt? Are we carrying freedom of speech to far?

An average 16 year old male wakes up to his alarm clock, showers, and throws on his favorite tee-shirt, the one sexual innuendoes on the front. He rides to school with his best friend, and reads the school newspaper article about racism in the school system. In his social studies class, he participates in a discussion about the corruption of government officials. At lunch, he and his friends indulge in a conversation about the legalization of certain drugs, such as marijuana. In Biology, the class explores different aspects of evolution and creation. The student goes home, oblivious to the freedoms he has exercised that day.

A simple idea it would seem, the first amendment is constantly being interpreted, analyzed, and challenged.

Organizations who voice a minority opinion regarding freedom of speech , such as the Ku Klux Klan and the Black Panthers, are often the objects of criticism. Many say these organizations promote violence. According to a 1969 Supreme court decision, advocacy of violence is protected under the first amendment unless the incitement is to imminent violence and there are people listening, ready and willing to commit violence. A threat of bodily harm, on the other hand, is not protected.

Do students have the same rights to freedom of speech and expression? If they do, then is a school dress code unconstitutional? In South Hadley, Massachusetts, two boys were asked to turn their "Co-ed Naked" tee-shirts inside out because the administration found them to be "offensive". The boys challenged the wording of the dress code, argueing that the wording of the dress code was unconstitutional. The students lost their appeal. So, are we taking our rights too far?

"I don't think that a dress code violates my first amendment rights unless what someone else is wearing offends me," said sophomore Miguel Morales.

There are issues yet to be worked out, but with each court case, the boundaries become more clear. George Orwell once said, "If large numbers of people believe in freedom of speech, there will be freedom of speech, even if the law forbids it. But if public opinion is sluggish, inconvenient minorities will be persecuted, even if laws exist to protect them." By Media Trent and Heather Ressler

Censorship in music will be enforced more, or at least in the selling of compact discs with explicit lyrics to minors. As of October 24, 1995, the Recording Industrial Association of America and the National Association of Recording Merchandisers announced plans to increase public awareness of the 10-year old Parental Advisory label, after recent studies showed that a majority of parents are unaware of this music-rating program. Some actions will be displaying signs explaining the logo in record stores, and including the label in ads of an offensive record.

- Anorexia nervosa affects fifteen percent of teenage girls who try to stay thin by starving themselves.

- Ten percent of high school students have used steroids to make themselves look bigger or try to become stronger for athletics.

- In a survey by USA Today teachers named sex and drugs as the two most dangerous activities teenagers are pressured into doing.

? about teenage pressure

Pressure isn't about just making good grades anymore. Pressure in the 90s has become a controlling factor in many teenagers' lives. Decisions regarding drugs, alcohol, sex, popularity,and grades, are weighing on the minds of this generation.

Stress we've all felt it and we all deal with it differently. Whether it's trying to get to class on time, or juggling school, jobs, friends and family, stress is all too often the focal point of teenage lives. Parents and teachers expecting good grades, friends expecting fun, and boyfriends and girlfriends expecting loving relationships are frequently major causes of stress. Bosses expect punctuality and a job well done, and team coaches expect excellence at every competition, which all add to the amount of pressure for teens. While having high expectations is good, unrealistic ideals can often place too much stress on a teenager. As if all of this wasn't enough, pressures like drugs, sex, and the anxieties to be popular add to the stress level. Stress can become a controlling factor in some teenagers lives.

How teens deal with stress imposed by the decision of whether to use drugs or not is often a tough one largely influenced by peers. In high school everything that elementary school teachers said about the dangers of drugs and cigarette smoking seemed obsolete. Decisions now were a result of personal resolve.

"My friends have tried to influence me to drink and smoke weed a few times. I wanted to, but I realized what that kind of stuff can do to you, so I refused," said senior Danyel Williams.

Sex is another subject most teenagers feel uncertain about at some point.. Students worry about whether or not they want to have sex, often feeling pressured and perhaps even later regretting it. "I got pressured into having sex when I was younger and now that I'm older I see what a mistake that was," said one junior girl.

Sometimes even the simplest of situations, like having friends becomes stressful. "I sometimes think that being popular is important because I think it's cool to know a lot of different kinds of people and have a lot of friends," said freshman Chad Smothers.

Dealing with pressure was done differently. Some people dealt with stress by simply trying to forget about it, while others found exerting physical force made them feel better. "Usually when I'm feeling low I play paintball to make myself feel better," said freshman Matthew Griggs. Other students found friends, parents, teachers, or some other support system to help them through bad times. "Whenever I'm feeling really stressed out about something I'll just pray about it," said junior Justin Smith. by Margarita Serrano

In the United States over half a milion people attempt suicide each year. Out of that half million, five thousand succeed. While these figures may seem startling by themselves, even scarier is the number of suicides and attempts by teens. In the last twenty years suicide has become the third leading cause of death for high school students, and the amount of suicide attempts has quadrupled. Experts say that most suicides are a result of bad home lives, drug use, or depression. Twenty percent of suicide attempts are repeated.

A Superman among extraordinary teachers

Mr. Reed entertained his classes, listened to our problems, and prepared us for the future. A revered teacher, he was more - a friend.

Celebrating his birthday in his Great Books class, Mr. Reed enthusiastically wipes out the flames on a cake baked by some students.

An avid Superman fan, Mr. Reed proudly displays his t-shirt hidden underneath his work clothes.

Learning doesn't always come from a book

Many teachers found special projects a good way to make a break from the traditional and keep classes lively, and students entertained.

Freshmen Kisha Keeney, Megan Hunter, Jill Martin, Dena Butler, and Keith Utter dress up like characters from Romeo and Juliet for an English grade.

Show and tell was always one of the best parts of youth, and Nick Summerville had the chance again. In Great Books he showed his collection of REM items.

Just killing time chillin with our friends

There was always time to catch up on the latest events, as time before, during, and after school was spent with friends.

Not having to hurry to her next class, senior Rebecca Branum takes a break from a reading assignment. Many students used free time for homework.

Angie Smillen, David Shultz, Mike Dyer and Aaron Williamson go over notes after school. Seeing students spending time together was a common sight.

Stirring up news isn't always hard work

Publications is not all about writing, layourts and deadlines Fun and friendships go hand and hand within the publication staffs.

The newspaper staff stayed late on nights before deadline. The stress level was high, and the atmosphere was a starting point for friendships that lasted beyond class.

Being an editor required a lot of hard work. Media Trent edits a staff member's story in order to catch any mistakes before they get in the book.

HONOR

The volleyball team gets hyped before a match. Their honor came not so much from their many victories, but from their attitudes and respect for tradition. The standards set at the beginning of the year carried through to an honorable end.

WISDOM

Seniors Diana Dugger and Ryan Edwards stand proudly as Mr. Albano recognizes the class of 1996. The wisdom they gained through four years of high school helped them to accomplish great things to become graduates.

COURAGE

Taking a moment to regroup, senior Johnny Spittler and the rest of the team had the couage to press on, even during their most trying games. Mr. Albano mentioned at the beginning of the year that he wanted each student to "take a risk", to do something even if they might fail. The football team's risk took them to a 5-5 record.

SERVICE

Charlie Corpuscle promoted the blood drive, asking eligible students to donate. Seniors Courtney Cochrun and Colleen Whisner help this volunteer get ready to campaign in the cafeteria. The blood drive was highly successful, it allowed students to give back to their community.

Firearms awareness has led to a decrease in the number of children involved in firearms accidents, but even one child is too many.

One in every four households has a handgun. Even if you don't own one, one of your neighbors probably does. Teach your children to leave the room if they see firearms, and make sure to follow these safety rules:

FIREARM SAFETY RULES

- Always keep firearms unloaded
- Place a trigger lock on all firearms
- Lock firearms in safe place
- Store bullets in seperate location
- Warn children about firearms in other homes

Protect our children through education and use of trigger locks!

You are the love of our lives. As we watched you grow into a fine young man, we couldn't have been more proud of you.

Parents hold their children's hands for awhile...their hearts forever.

Congratulations Rob! May all your dreams come true.

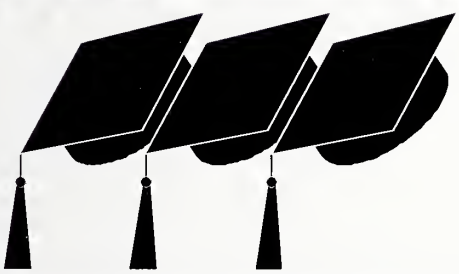
Media Trent

Media, you've accomplished so much already, but we know more great moments are around the corner.

It seems like only yesterday that you charged us admission to watch you dance in your room. Yet here we are, watching you waltz away to Ball State. You still occasionally give us your puppy-dog eyes, but you've grown from that freckle-faced little girl into a beautiful young lady! We'll miss you greatly when you're at college, but we realize that the days of following you around to make sure you're safe are over.

As we always have, we will watch with pride as you take yet another step in your life's journey. Remember as you go down that path that we are proud to be your parents and we will always be here for you!



Congratulations

With all our love,

Mom, Dad & Brother

Soon we won't have to try five times to wake you up for school or work. We won't wonder when you'll be home or whom you're with. Instead we'll wonder what you're doing so far out West, and we'll marvel at the wonderful new person who comes home to us each time. Learn, have fun, meet new people.

As your years in high school draw to a close I am filled with mixed emotions. Happiness as I share in your accomplishments and sadness that a phase of your life is over that I have enjoyed immensely.

I am proud of how you have always done your best, played sports and held down a job at the same time.

May God bless you and guide you.
I love you,

Daren Hemingway

It only seems like yesterday that you came rushing into the world, our little MIRACLE baby. And now 17 years later you are graduating. Where did the years fly by to?

On that sunny day in August, your dad and I discussed what we hoped you would accomplish with your life, and so far Daren, you have not let us down. But most importantly, I don't think you have let yourself down either. If you continue on in life the way that you have started, you should be able to accomplish anything you set out to do.

You have grown and matured into such a fine young man, one that any parent would be proud of. Sheba knew how lucky she was to have you for a Master. We hope you realize how VERY proud you have made all of us.

Have a HAPPY and HEALTHY life. Enjoy college and Hawaii.

Congratulations

We love you so very much,

Melissa Anne Smith

Dear Missy,

As you go out into the world as a young woman we want you to know that we have total confidence that you will accomplish anything that you set out to do. You have our love and our respect and you should be as proud of yourself as we are of you as your parents. Go for it all Miss.

Johnny Spittler

You have grown to be an incredible young man. I was proud of you when you were born. I was even prouder of you when you were a young boy. And, now as I watch you mature in such a wonderful way, I am more proud of you than ever before. You have made it so easy for me to be a parent! I have always known that I was extremely fortunate to have you for a son, but when I talk to other parents, I realize even more how lucky I am. You are such a JOY to me and I extend to you an extra special thanks for being so very easy to raise. Everyday and every year with you has been a complete miracle. I am so happy with the direction that your life is taking you. I want you to know that sometimes you will still make mistakes and when those times occur the proudest mother in the world is always here to encourage you, to understand you, to talk with you, to support you, and to LOVE YOU FOREVER!!

Congratulations

With the determination of a Dandelion, you keep bouncing back and extending the range and depth of your efforts to excel: Just Say No, NHS, Homework, Drafting, etc. As a baby, you made a car from a diaper box, "Driving" to places unknown. Now you dream of flying to places unknown in outer space. Like the Dandelion, keep bouncing back, achieving your goals, reaching for your dreams until they become reality

Heather: The years seemed to have flown by since we first met you eighteen years ago. You've been all over the world with us and to some places more than once. It seems like only yesterday, but to you it must seem like a lifetime.

Chris: It has been only a short time since we first met, but perhaps it will be a lifetime. As you move on to college, remember we're very proud of both of you. Never give up, be there for each other and remember we're always behind you.

Congratulations

Colophon

500 copies of the 59th volume of the yearbook were printed by Herff Jones Yearbooks at the cost to students of $30 each. Mrs. Cathy Wolfe served as the Herff Jones representative and Mrs. Nancy Williams was the in-plant consultant. Ms. Alison Brown was the Yearbook Advisor and Mr. Mark Haab was the Publications Director. The book was printed on 80 lb. bordeaux paper. All photos were taken and developed in Warren Central's darkroom by the staff photographers, or taken and developed by Prestige Portraits. The crest was designed by Kalin Reed. All layouts were created on Pagemaker software. The book was printed under the authority of Principal Robert Albano.
